True beauty lovers know that wherever you go, your makeup follows. This is a tight-knit relationship. When you go without your favorite products and miss them when you are away, you don't feel complete. Okay, enough with the sway story. The point is that beauty junkies need their go-to products with them at the time of need. This is why makeup travel bags are very essential. To avoid feeling like you're missing something, keep this thing close all the time. We're talking traveling anywhere: work, drinks, date, or all over the country. If we're honest, Team Byrdie has lost count of how many makeup travel bags we own. (One can never be enough.) And the thing with makeup bags is that you go through them quickly because the products can get a little messy. So there is always room to spare. You love your makeup products, don't you? Treat them carefully to a makeup bag that catches your eye. Click for our all-time faves, which are comfortable clutch when we're on the move. I can assure you how clutch this makeup bag is. It might look small, but it can literally fit my five essential products: foundation, concealer, mascara, blush, eyebrow pencil, and eyebrow gel. All you need is to whip up a nice face to beat. It's real skin, so it won't feel voluminous in your bag. Pop & Brushes Makeup Case $95 Shop Every makeup lover needs a Pop & Brush makeup case. It's a fan favorite because it's portable enough to fit all your products when you're on the move. Its width even allows you to stack products, giving you double space. Plus, its waterproof design is to die for, and is that silk trim we spot? Furla Yoyo Cosmetic Case Set $178 Shop Why is there one makeup case where there can be two? Furla made these top-notch makeup travel bags that are so beautiful they look like handbags. This set comes with a medium size makeup bag and its mini little sister lined with vanity mirror. Skinnydip Dazzle Makeup Bag $20 Shop flossy makeup bag win. We're never mad at a cute holographic bag, mainly because it always stands out so you have a better chance of not misplacing your makeup. This is, in essence, a win-win situation. Charlotte Tilbury 1. Edition Makeup Bag $30 Shop This is decorated with red lip kisses, and it was dreamed up by the cosmetic queen, Charlotte Tilbury. You need it. Sephora Collection Quote Time Clutch $7 Shop You will never misplace your makeup bag if it looks like this. The holiday season is oh so close to getting the festive spirit early with this metallic designed event. Also, it's the perfect accessory, and who doesn't love the cosmetic case that doubles as a clutch? Next: Team Byrdie thinks you need to add these dreamy fall makeup colors to your makeup bag now. Hey Everyone! this will be my part 1 video of my Bad Girl vs Cute Girl Makeup. I'm uploading my Girl's makeup first and so be sure to subscribe to my channel to see Bad Girl's makeup! and follow me lg for more jackiee_je Annie Garau politely. #Nomakeup selfies filling up your Instagram feed. Apps that offer to hide pimples in pictures. Thousands of beauty products that promise a natural look. Celebrities mocked running errands bare-faced. Conflicting messages about beauty surround us, and sometimes it feels like the lines are blurred so much that beauty is equated with competence and made-up face is the only thing that can possibly give confidence. That's exactly what 20-year-old Annie Garau explores with her Born with It Beauty project. While at least in the first month of the relationship, Annie is going completely makeup-free for all of 2014 as a junior in college, no less, trying to remove the belief that she needs cosmetics to feel valuable. Women's health is low deeper to learn how Annie has perpetuated the confidence to stick to her pact for almost eight months, as her perception of natural beauty has changed over the course of her project, and what she hopes to have got when it's all over. WH: What inspired you to create a Born With It Beauty project? Annie: I started this project because I had started to notice how often my friends and I were putting myself down because of the way we looked. On a personal level, I think it could help my self-esteem if I can learn to accept my looking for what they are and focus on other, meaningful qualities. I also hoped that other women would relate to what I was doing and maybe learn from my experiment. I came up with the idea just after New Year's Eve and I can't believe I've actually made it this far! What makeup did you wear every day before it started? I've always been subtle about my makeup. Not much bright colors or heavy eyeliner. I usually wear some cover up, bronzer, and blush in winter and brown eyeliner and mascara. In half, I usually add eye shadow, lip liner, and lipstick. Have you noticed people treating you differently now that you're not wearing makeup? I've felt like people have treated me differently, but I honestly don't know if it's because I looked different or acted differently. The guys at the parties definitely approached me less [before]. It was probably a mixture of how I looked and how uncomfortable I felt. I got hit on less with strangers, but it's actually turned out to be kind of nice. Men always say that they prefer natural beauty, but have that been your experience over the last eight months? I've talked to a lot of guys about makeup since I've started the project and it's really interesting. Most of them have never spent more than two seconds thinking about it before. I've found that many of them say they like girls without makeup best, but they actually have no idea what makeup-free looks like! Therefore, they think that they attract girls with natural beauty, but it is usually girls who use makeup in a subtle way. I read that have a friend, has he been supportive? My friend has been very very I've really tried to quit a few times and he didn't let me. For some reason, he could see the big picture when I couldn't. He also loves the fact that it takes me half the time to get ready. It's been really funny to see how the experiment has changed his perspective. Now he notices makeup for other girls and thinks it looks weird. Have you felt differently about going makeup-free if you had one? I've been waiting for this question since it all started, but you're the first to ask! For sure. I wish I could have said that I could have done this one, but I don't think it's true. Not to worry about what the guys thought of me is the only way I was able to stick with it. Sad, but true. MORE: Awesome news for Self Love from the Harvard Women's Rugby team not wearing makeup helped you gain confidence? It has certainly helped me gain credibility, but not as I expected. I had to learn to rely on my personality confidence, and it's been really great for me. I love the fact that I can enter the room of strangers now and think just about how I handle it, not how I look. I don't think I've ever had a giant beauty star's day where I realize that I'm actually a supermodel, but I'm much more comfortable with how I look. I don't care much less. Have you had any other realization of the company as a result? I have understood that women can be our own greatest enemy. After being conscious of the decision to talk about my appearances less, I started thinking about them less, and then I started caring for them less. Now they're just wondering less to me! I've learned that even if appearances do impact the way people treat you and feel about you, people actually care a lot more about your personality. Have you missed wearing makeup on special occasions like formality and day nights? It does feel strange getting dressed up when I can't put on makeup, especially since other girls go all out for these occasions, so I stand out even more. It doesn't feel like a much special day because my face looks like always, but it's still fun to get dressed up. How do other women react when they hear about this project? Have you joined others? Other women all say that they really like my project and are excited about it, but I haven't gotten anyone to join me yet! But if any women stop saying bad things about themselves because of the project, then it's worth it. Do you think you're going back to wearing makeup after a year is up? Do you just wear less makeup? I'm not against makeup; it is a trivial thing in itself. I'm just against the feeling that I needed it to feel valuable. So I'll probably wear it on special occasions next year, but I'll take a completely different mindset.
